Now We're Cooking, and How! Cooking through the Ages

Humans have been cooking for thousands of years, presumably after the taming of fire. Since then, we've used ovens, stoves, and microwaves to cook things using glass, cast iron, copper, and Teflon-coated aluminum pots and pans. How did people cook their food before the discovery of metal, glass, and pottery, and how have our methods of cooking changed over time? How might our cooking change in the future?

Jessica Day George, Kristy S. Gilbert, Benjamin K. Hewett, Megan Hutchins, Mongo

Saturday - 1 PM

Panelist
Room: Maple

Where the Crap does Crap Go? Dealing with Trash and Sewage

All life produces waste, but if waste gets out of hand, as it does when lots of organisms come together to make a living, it can get dangerous. How do ancient and modern cities, armies, farming communities, and space colonies deal with the trash, sewage, and refuse of their activities?

Benjamin K. Hewett, Renae Kingsley, L. Palmer, Kal Spriggs, Darci Stone
